Technical Field The present invention relates generally to data processing systems and, in particular, to data processing systems and methods for acquiring and processing data from data streams. Still more particularly, the present invention relates to a system and method for transferring and collecting data streams from the Internet. 2. Description of the Related Art The Internet offers tremendous opportunities for new commerce, new communication, new advertising, and new activities. To facilitate these activities, more than a billion people rely on commercial services that provide them with access to the Internet. These commercial services provide Internet access to multiple types of commercial entities. Most of these commercial entities access the Internet to provide their services to end users. These commercial entities include online stores for selling products, online banks that provide financial services, online booking agents that book travel reservations, online warehouses that allow the online purchase of books, music and video, etc. Many other types of commercial entities exist. For example, access to the Internet enables entities that provide a variety of services and information. For example, entities that provide people with voice mail, e-mail, text messaging, television programming, weather reports, stock market information, etc. are available. Each of the different types of commercial entities present their own set of problems in providing Internet access to their customers. For example, online stores face numerous challenges in providing their customers with access to products and services.

The driver installs with 1 click.This invention relates to an electronic image stabilizer for use with film or video cameras. It is especially designed to stabilize video images on low-resolution television sets. Video cameras are used to produce television signals for viewing on high-resolution television sets, which are expensive. Often times the video images produced by a video camera, which has not been stabilized, are unstable and unstable images can produce a poor quality video signal. In conventional video cameras, there is no provision for stabilizing the video images at the output of the camera. Other types of camera's which have provisions for stabilizing an image at the camera output are extremely expensive, such as those manufactured by Kodak. The cost of such cameras make them uneconomical for use with low-resolution television sets. Accordingly, it is an object of this invention to provide an electronic image stabilizer circuit for use with low-resolution television sets.This disclosure relates generally to the field of computer systems and, more particularly, to managing local and remote data. A computer data system may be either local or remote. A computer data system is local if it is proximate to a user or application that is processing the data, and is remote if it is not. For example, computer data systems may be remote if they are at a site remote from the user or application. A remote computer data system, however, may be a local computer data system if it is proximate to a server, other computer, or a network with which the user or application is communicating. Remote computer data
